

SETUP

- Make a pile for each type of land tile.
- Make separate supply piles for Potato, Corn, Chocolate, and Coins.
- Select (at random) the appropriate number of llama cards for your player count, and create a column for each type, with ascending values (higher values over lower values).
 - 2 players: 6 cards of each llama type
 - 3 players: 8 cards of each llama type
 - 4 players: 11 cards of each llama type
- Shuffle character cards, form a draw pile with them, draw and display 5 starting cards.
- Randomly select 3 purple and 4 blue objective cards and form a display.
- Each player gets a starting board, 3 foundation tiles and 4 markers of the same color.
- Deal coins: Player 1 (0 coin), Player 2 (1 coin), Player 3 (2 coins), Player 4 (3 coins)
- Player 1 gets the starting player marker (the shepherd's crook).

ON YOUR TURN

① You MUST play a land tile (can be rotated and flipped):

Extending: Place the tile on the first level of your estate. At least one space of the tile must be adjacent to your estate.

Then, you MAY place one of your markers on the topmost empty space of an objective card (or move one of your markers from one objective card to another). You can have only one of your markers per objective card. (Note: the middle space of each objective card must stay empty in 2 player games)

OR

Building: Place the tile on top of your start board or previously placed land tiles. Tiles must line up (no crooked or diagonal placement). You can't place a tile and align it perfectly on top of another tile of the same shape. There may be no gaps or llamas under the tile you place. You may place foundation tiles before building.

After building, gain one token for each icon covered by the tile you just placed (Huts grant you a character card which you can draw from the draw pile or draw from the display then replace).

② Then, you MAY feed ONE llama: exchange 4 resources with the topmost llama card of the same resource type. (2 coins = 1 token of any crop. Can be used cumulatively) If you have 10 or more crop tokens, you MUST feed a llama. After feeding the llama, place a llama figure in your estate, on an empty space without an icon, at any level.

Use any number of character cards before and/or after playing a tile, but never use a card more than ONCE per turn (Turn card sideways to keep track. Duplicates are allowed).

End of Game Trigger: The current turn ends when there is ONE type of llama left or FOUR land tiles left.

End of game: Add up llama card points, objective points, crop points (1 point per token) and coin points (1 point for each set of 2 coins). Player with most points wins. If tied, most points from llama cards wins.
